Why doesn't my Instagram let me make an account? I tried to make an account many times for the past few months but it always says "Sorry, something went wrong creating your account. Please try again soon."

A2A: Typically, this happens if you have already created too many accounts from the same device. As of today, Instagram will allow you to create at most 5 IG accounts from your mobile phone. If you try to create more, you will get such a message, or another message indicating you have created the maximum number of accounts.

The best way to bypass this limit is to use another device. This is when having a girlfriend, brother, sister, or roommate becomes quite valuable :P

I've never experienced that myself, but here are some things you can try.

Before we start, please know these steps only apply to the OFFICIAL INSTAGRAM APP. If you're using some cheap knockoff version of Instagram because Instagram has no official app for your phone's operating system, then I cannot help you.

Update your Instagram App OR Uninstall & Reinstall the Instagram Official App

Maybe your Instagram application isn't up to date and is still experiencing bugs that may have been solved with new updates. So, if you have not tried yet, update the app using your App Store or Google Play store.

If the app is already up to date and has no more updates, then try to uninstall the app from your device, and then reinstall it. Sometimes things go wrong for whatever reason, so this might work.

Wifi Problems

received that message on Depop, Twitter, Instagram— and I think that's it.

Even if my device says, "Connected to [Wifi Name Here]", sometimes it's false. Sometimes the connection is still weak, and it'll take ages for your device to actually finish loading your content. So, sometimes instead of loading for forever, you'll get messages like I mentioned.

So, open your web browser on your device, attempt to go on a website, and see if your device's wifi connection actually works. If it does, it's something else. If it doesn't, then you've found your problem. Get better wifi.

Create an account online

Are you at least able to login and use Instagram on the app (with a preexisting account), and the only problem is it won't allow you to create more accounts? OR is the app completely not functional; meaning you cannot login or use the app at all.

If it's the former (where you can login and use Instagram with a preexisting account, but cannot make new accounts), then create an Instagram account on their website. Sign up with an email, make your password, and set your profile pic, and then just login on your phone. Problem solved

Clone the App (Android Only)

There's an app I use called App Cloner. This is its icon under the Google Play Store.

What I love about this app is that it's straight forward. I've wanted to clone apps a long time ago, but I've always read that I had to "root my device"—whatever that means. It was off-putting because it required too many steps like connecting it to a computer, changing settings, yadda yadda yadda.

With this app, all you have to do is install the app, select which app you want to clone, it'll clone it, and all you have to do is install the APK they give you. I believe it has at least a million downloads, and so it's safe to assume that it's safe and not malware.

My use for this app cloner was to clone Instagram. As you may or may not know, you can only sign into five accounts per Instagram app. I have like 9 accounts: 5 of them are influencer accounts, 2 of them are for my clothing business, 1 of them is for my other side business, and the last one is my personal Instagram.

My solution was to clone Instagram, and it works!! It's literally Instagram.

If you are really having problems with Instagram, then clone it! The clone version might just be your solution. You never know until you try, right?

Right now, you're only able to create up to 5 accounts on your Instagram. If you have some that you don't use at all, you can delete your account or simply change your username to create the new profile without having to create a new account. You can also use a different device to help you use the account. You can use a social media scheduling tool to keep it active without having to bug a bf or friend to use their phone if you used their device instead.
